

handcrafted and hand blown in Bali.

Glass is a powerful vehicle for selfexpression, it is a magical substance, caught somewhere in time between a solid and a liquid, yet it is also a very demanding substance, requiring both confidence and abundant respect.

Bali's glass artisans work in the backstreet of villages in the hinterland, transforming fluid matter into sophisticated, solid art. Blessed with the natural creative aptitude of the Balinese, they are highly skilled in the techniques of blowing, laminating, spinning, fusing, chiseling, slumping and casting. Every technique is different. Slumping, for example, is where a sheet of glass is placed upon a block in an oven and left to melt, like cheese on toast. The spinning technique is accomplished with fine, long threads of glass. Slumping might be combined with lamination; spinning might be combined with chiseling; blowing is fused with a bit of everything. These fascinating processes yield vessels such as tumblers, goblets, wine glasses, cocktail glasses and martini glasses, chiseled ice buckets, water jugs, exquisite bowls, decorative genie bottles with glass stoppers, and blown vases enhanced by shards and threads.

Glass fragments are converted into a molten mass before being shaped and transformed into pieces of sophisticated tableware, including chiseled latticed squares, rectangular plates and leaf platters, as well as tactile blocks, paperweights and crystal balls. The distinctive slumping technique produces fishbowls and terrariums, floating flower-blossom bowls and chunky candle holders draped over natural teak roots or driftwood to create eye-catching works of art.

The artisans work primarily with soda glass that has been recycled from plate glass windows. The green hue is its natural colour caused by the iron content in the sand. An additional colour is the stunning cobalt blue showcased in some of the smaller items, such as our toothpick holders.
